Notes

Still rough overall. The final design may look significantly different.

A An interactive book page browser similar to the Flash app on the Gwen site.

B When checked, a dropdown shows below the checkbox, allowing users to choose a concert location.

The checkbox will be hidden until the first concert photos become available.

C Explanatory text describing the book output options. Depending on the user's age, these items may change.

Notes

In progress, not final text or treatment.

This is the first pass at a page that shows thumbnails of all pages.

This page needs to transition users into the editing experience, with a “soft landing” into the functionality of the book editor.

3 Default Editor View*

Notes

- In this case the user selected page 5 from the previous Browse page.
- A If the user is not allows to upload personal content, this tab will not show.
- B 26 page count reflects choosing a concert city, which adds 6 pages to the book's default 20.

Notes

A This box is a dialog (faux pop-up dialog window).

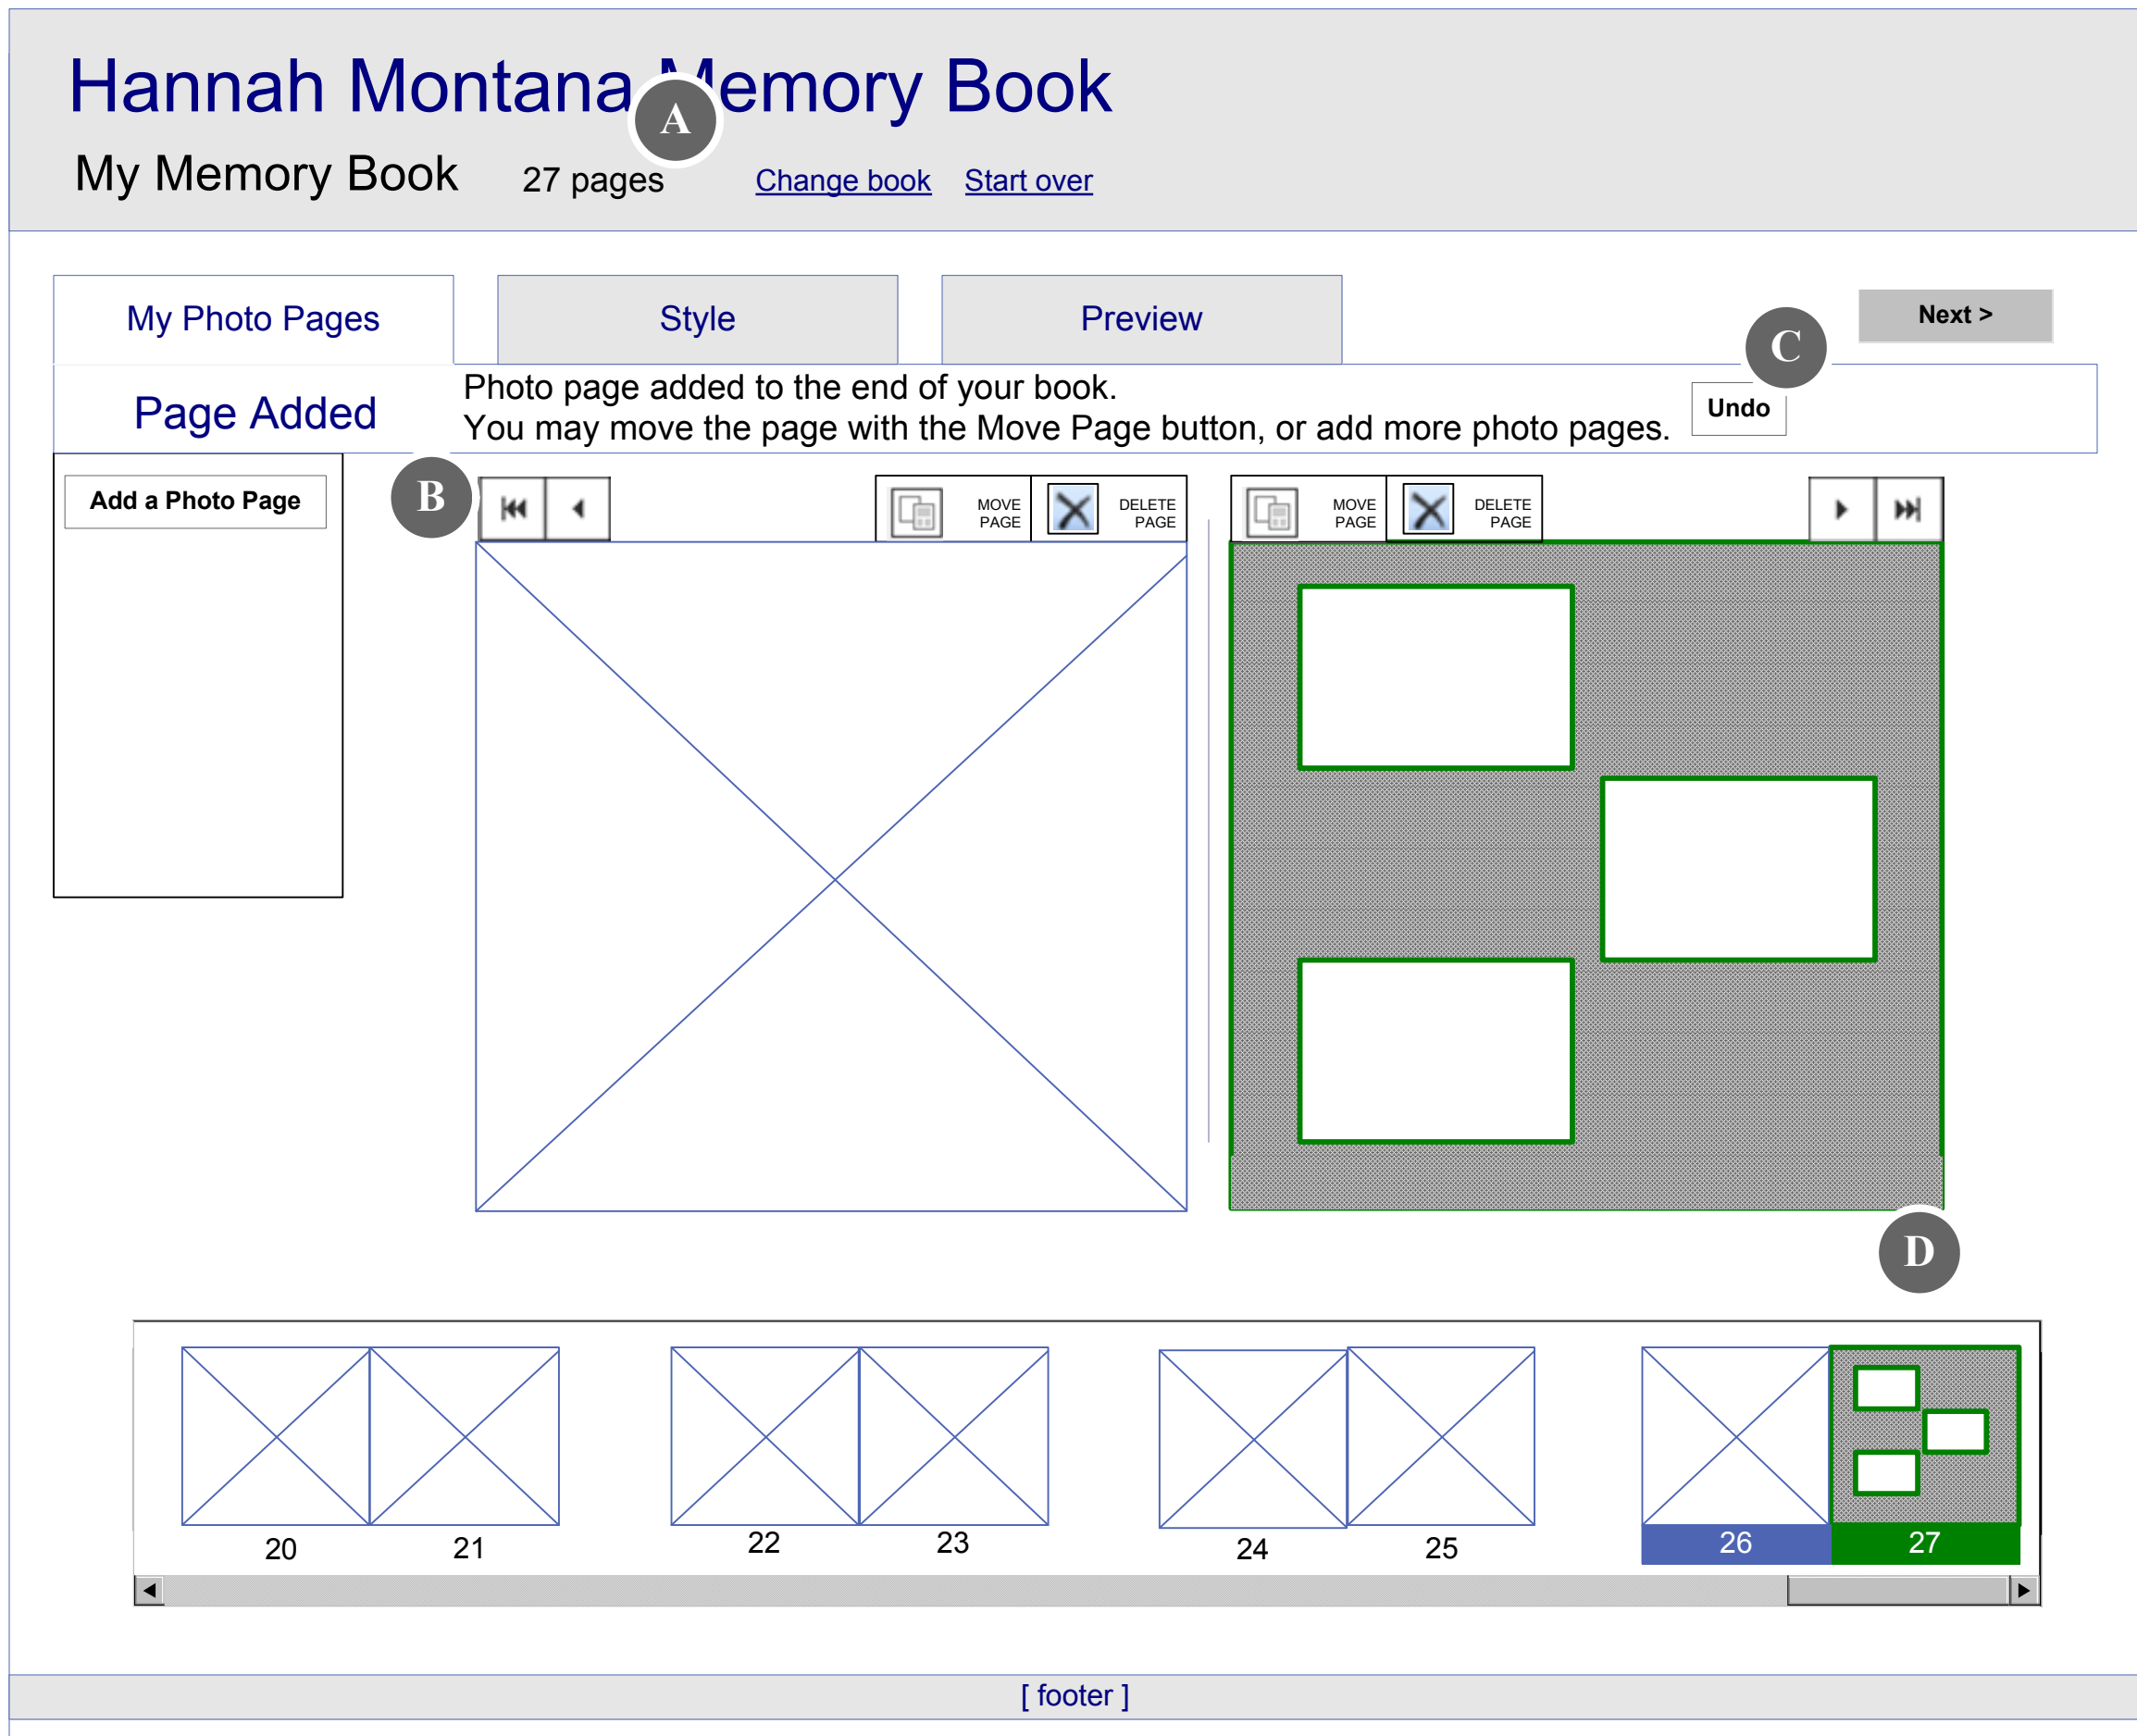

B Horizontally scrolling box with different 3-photo backgrounds and layouts. These layouts are just examples, not final choices.

C Add Page brings up a timer that displays while the photos are uploading, then the dialog goes away and the user goes to the next view, with the photo page added.

D Cancel closes the dialog without uploading any photos or adding a page.

- A Page count updated for the new page.
- B Page editing and nav buttons.
- C Undo button: Show an “Are you sure?” confirmation dialog, then remove the most recent page, or undo a move or delete.
- D Use a color change or other design treatment to differentiate user personal pages from standard full-bleed Hannah pages.

Add rotate ... also crop and zoom? Swap, but conflicts with stickers ...

Notes

- A Click to select between comments and stickers. This is rough, but might work similar to the right-side box in the Tabblo book editor (without the floating).
- B Comments and stickers should drag and drop similar to moving photos on a fine photo grid. One difference is that the content never leaves the lightbox. You can have any number of instances of each comment or sticker.
- C Dragging an item off the two page display, or back into the lightbox, deletes that instance. (May need to add a specific delete icon or function.)
